1830 Federal Census Branford M19-9, pages 167-184

The enumerator for the 1830 Branford census was Erastus Osborn. Enumeration day for the 1830 federal census was June 30, 1830 and 12 months was allowed for its completion. This writer has added the page and line numbers for easier identification. The 1830 census eliminates the categories of farm and commerce but breaks down the age categories further. North Branford and Northford continue to be included in the Branford census and are not separated until 1850. The population of Branford, North Branford and Northford is stable at about 2200 people indicating a slow down in development and of removal to other states. The trend toward smaller families continues.

The names on the census are easy to read and spelling is standardized. First name abbreviations are only used for William (Wm.). Hash marks in the columns for the male and female categories are well marked. Again, the term junior may mean the son of or the youngest person in town of that name

There were no slaves listed in the Branford 1830 population schedule. The age categories for free colored persons are different than those for free white. The column marks are more difficult to follow for the former as they are on a second page. The entries for free colored families are listed below. There are other free colored persons living in Branford in other households, often as farm workers or in some cases house servants. The total number of free colored people living in Branford in 1830 is 55.

Attached is this writer's interpretation of the genealogy of the people in the 1830 census. It is noted when relatives lived next to or near each other. The route the census taker took is fairly clear, starting in North Branford north to Northford, back through North Branford center along North Branford Road. The enumerator jumps over to Branford Hills, to Double Beach, along Harbor Street and onto East Main Street and Mill Plain. From the western end of East Main Street the enumerator heads toward Indian Neck, Damascus, Pine Orchard and then to Stony Creek. He leaves Stony Creek by way of Paved Street and records the families at the eastern end of East Main Street toward the Guilford line. He then jumps to Branford center starting in the vicinity of the Harrison House (124 Main Street) and records the families in the Main Street/Bradley Street area. He heads east toward the current library, to Branford center, South Main Street and ends with Montowese Street.
